Tokyo, Japan – Keiko Sasaoka is proud to offer Remembrance: Sanriku, Fukushima, 2011-2014 for release on December 25, 2021

Remembrance: Sanriku, Fukushima, 2011-2014 is a photo book in both English and Japanese that chronicles a project by photographer Keiko Sasaoka, who made repeated trips to Japan’s Tohoku region after the 2011 earthquake disaster. 124 color photographs taken during the first four years after the disaster were carefully selected that bring into focus the transition of time following on the moment when all sense of balance tragically capsized. The original visage of towns and villages has vanished, along with those of people forced to undergo suffering beyond imagining—the absence captured by her lens opens our beings to hope. Her camera interrogates of these landscapes the very meaning of “the place we live.”
